Hi there,

We're excited that you want to participate in our unconference on Wednesday, 21 June. Our topic is Unlearning Energy Systems, which is about taking ownership of your energy supply, creating micro-grids, sharing energy, self-reliance, open-source and non-proprietary energy, embracing systems change and finding new ways to relate to energy amongst other things.

In case you have never been, an unconference is an event that is participant-led. The organizers merely provide the framework so the participants can meet like-minded people and discuss the topics they are passionate about, share their perspectives, unlearn some limiting beliefs, form groups to take action together, etc. It's basically all the best parts of a conference (e.g. having great conversations with interesting people during the coffee break) without all the boring parts.

Who should attend?

Anyone who is passionate about the topics mentioned above. We would love to have you there to share your perspective, exchange experiences and learn from your knowledge on the wider topic of energy supply.

What can you expect?

A highly interactive event that is co-created between all of us. We want to hear your questions and concerns, your ideas for solutions and your knowledge on the topic. Lead a discussion if you feel called to or participate in the discussions hosted by others.

What do you need to bring?

Please bring a laptop if you have one. Bring your questions and concerns, your ideas for solutions and your knowledge on the topic.

What will be the outcome?

Each group will take notes on their discussion, capturing the most important points mentioned, the concerns, the ideas for solutions and the suggested next steps. Focus groups may be formed to realize the solutions that are found. All these notes will be shared on a public Google Drive for everyone to have access even to the discussions they weren't part of.
